

DOMINO RALLY—Ross Cutler (above) tries out a game that uses Domino shaped pieces.

Stair District Library breaks open the new toys

CONNECTAGONS—Madison Russell (left) creates a colorful design with wood disks that connect to one another.

CARDBOARD—Despite all the enticing new toys, a collection of empty cardboard boxes was a big draw throughout the day. Julian Reason-Zamudio stretches to reach the top while Maisy Hill brings a box into position.

ZOOB—Hayden Johnson snaps Zoob pieces together to create interesting shapes. Zoob was among the creative construction toys the library purchased with a Curiosity Creates grant from the Association for Library Service to Children, a division of the American Library Association, funded by Disney. The toys are intended to encourage creativity and 3-D and abstract thinking.

QUADRILLA—Kids at the bottom of the photo follow a sheet of suggested layouts for the Quadrilla tracks to create a path for marbles to follow.

SUSPEND—Tiffany Zamudio carefully balances a metal rod, hoping that the entire structure doesn't tumble. Piper Thompson watches her work.
